Postal Nook — Product Demo Video Script

Runtime ~78s · 6 Scenes · Screen Recording + VO Inner Monologue

Concept

No talking head, no feature list — the screen is the star. Over it runs one skeptical woman's inner monologue: a friend ("H") told her to try this, and she's sure it'll be another product that claims to be simple.

The joke: the product keeps finishing before her sentences do. Every complaint she starts, the UI has already solved. Her sarcasm never gets argued with — it just runs out of road.

Golden rule: the cursor never hunts. It moves like it already knows where things are. If a screen takes longer to load than her line takes to say, cut the line — not the truth.

Her arc:

Scene	Headspace
1	Smug — "this'll be painful"
2	Caught off guard, still defending herself
3	Curious, sarcasm slipping
4	Suspicious of the catch — there isn't one
5	Impressed against her will
6	Converted, slightly embarrassed

Scene 1 — The Login `0:00–0:09`

Screen: Clean centered login page. Email autofills, one click Sign in, dashboard resolves in a single soft fade — no spinner, no delay.

VO: "Okay. I don't know why H keeps pushing this thing on me. Hot shot. I'm sure it's going to be extremely easy —" (dashboard already loaded) "…huh."

Timing: Sign-in must complete during "extremely easy" — protect that overlap. Music: Silence until 0:02, then one dry synth pluck. No drums.

Scene 2 — The Dashboard `0:09–0:22`

Screen: Overview cards + three quick-links: Usage · Mail · Support. Cursor hovers each in turn — no menus, no scrolling.

VO: "Fine. Fast login. Big deal. Now comes the part where I go digging through eleven menus to find one thing —" (hovers all three cards) "…or it's just three buttons. On the first screen."

Timing: Hold the wide shot an extra beat after the last hover. Music: Second note joins; soft kick enters on "three buttons."

Scene 3 — Usage `0:22–0:37`

Screen: Six stats count up fast (~0.15s apart): Shredding Requests, Mail Forwarding Requests, Storage Days, Scanned Pages, Mail Items Received, Number of Recipients.

VO: "Alright, but where's the real data. The stuff you have to export to a spreadsheet and decode —" (all six land) "Shredded. Forwarded. Scanned. Stored. Received. Recipients. …That's everything I'd have asked for. That's just — everything."

Timing: All six counters land within 4 seconds — the point is it arrives all at once. Music: Full groove — warm, clean, forward-moving.

Scene 4 — Billing (the exit that isn't hidden) `0:37–0:52`

Screen: Plan, exact charges, next billing date — all legible. A big, obvious Unsubscribe button at the bottom, not buried.

VO: "Here it is. The catch. This is where they hide the cancel button behind three support emails and a phone call —" (long hover on Unsubscribe, doesn't click) "It's right there. They're not scared of me leaving."

Timing: The hover is the emotional peak — hold a full second of stillness. Music: Drops to one sustained pad on "It's right there," then groove returns.

Scene 5 — Business Services & Referral `0:52–1:05`

Screen: Three cards — Get an EIN/ITIN · Form an LLC · Register an Agent. Quick form open/close, then cut to Refer a Friend (priority support perks). Referral link copied, "Copied" toast.

VO: "Wait. It does the business stuff too? EIN. LLC. Registered agent. The three things I've been putting off since February." (link copied) "And apparently if I tell someone about it, I get priority support. …H. H, you absolute opportunist."

Timing: Keep VO tight — don't narrate what's already legible on screen. Music: Playful lift; light percussion accent on the "Copied" toast.

Scene 6 — Support & Close `1:05–1:18`

Screen: Short support form → submit → green confirmation → Ticket History tab (past tickets with visible statuses). Pull back to dashboard, logo, end card.

VO: "And when something does go wrong — a form. That's it. Then a history tab, so I'm not shouting into an inbox wondering if anyone read it." (pulls back) "…I'm going to have to text H. I hate this."

End card: Postal Nook — "Hundreds of people already stopped worrying about their mail." + CTA/URL. Hold 2s, cut to black.

Music: Resolves on the final line — one clean chord, soft tail under the end card.

Music Direction

Time	Feel
0:00–0:09	Near-silence, single dry pluck
0:09–0:22	Second note, soft kick, curiosity
0:22–0:37	Full groove, warm and confident
0:37–0:44	Strips to one pad for the Unsubscribe beat
0:44–1:18	Groove returns, lifts, resolves on the last line

Licensing search terms: “minimal warm electronic,” “playful tech underscore,” “light indie synth, no vocals.” Avoid corporate-uplifting stock — it fights the sarcasm.

Production Notes

- Voice: dry, unhurried, slightly amused — talking to herself, not to camera. Comedy comes from underplaying.
- Screen capture: 60fps, real (anonymized) account data — no empty states. Pre-fill Usage numbers, ticket history, billing.
- Cursor: slightly enlarged, subtle click highlights, eased movement — confident hand, not a robot.
- Captions: burned-in VO, bottom-third, high contrast, one line at a time.
- Runtime: total 1:18. To hit 60s: cut the LLC form open in Scene 5, trim Scene 2’s pan by 2s. Don’t cut Scene 4 — it’s the one that sells.